

A Reading A-Z Decodable Book • Word Count: 311

Jake and Gail Go to Spain

DECODABLE • 56

Jake and Gail Go to Spain

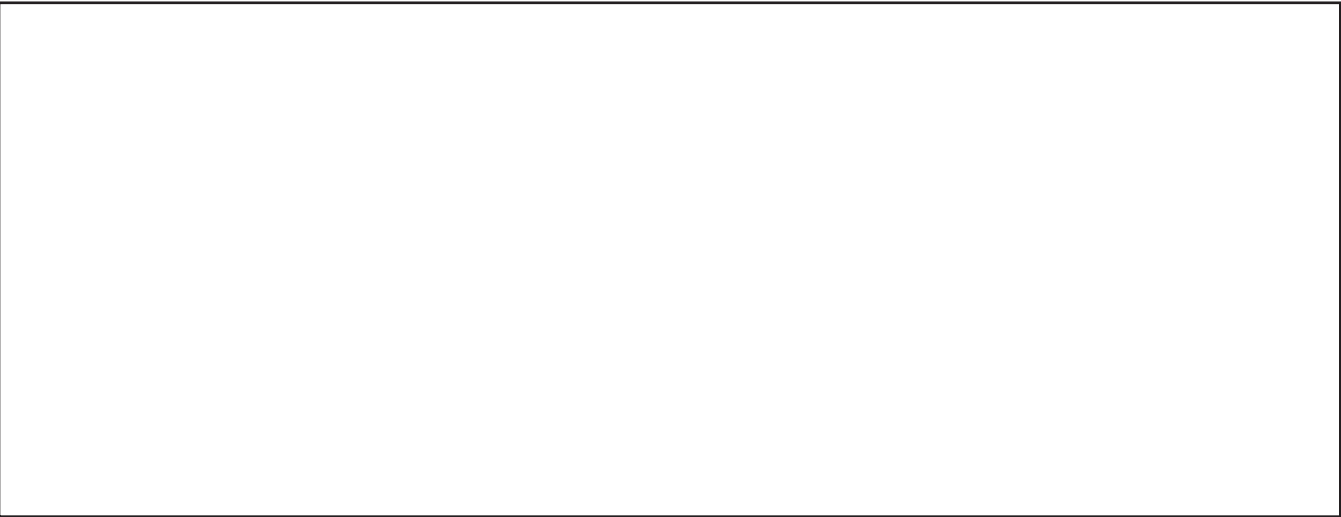

Written by Robert Charles • Illustrated by Chris Grine

Jake and Gail Go to Spain

Written by Robert Charles Illustrated by Chris Grine

www.readinga-z.com

ELEMENTS USED IN THIS BOOK
New phonic element	long /ā/ digraph: ai, ay, ea, eigh, ey
Words with new phonic element	bay, brain, day, eight, fail, Gail, gray, great, hey, mail, main, Maine, paid, pail, pain, paint, plain, rail, rain, sail, snail, Spain, stay, they, train, wail, wait, way, steak, weigh
Reviewed phonic elements	long /ē/ and short /e/ digraphs
Story words	another, people, ticket
Special considerations	inflectional endings -ed, -er, -ing, -s ; plural ending -s ; possessive 's ; two-syllable decodable words

The people of Spain paid Jake and Gail lots of cash for their paintings.
Jake and Gail mailed their paintings
all over the land.
They stayed in Spain and got rich
from their paintings.

Jake the snake and Gail the snail lived by a bay in Maine.
They wanted to take a trip.

“Where can we go?” asked Jake.

“How about Spain?” asked Gail.

So, Gail and Jake got eight brushes
and eight pails of paint.
Each day that it rained,
they stayed inside and painted.
They became great painters.

“We can take a plane,” said Gail.

“No way! I hate planes,” wailed Jake.

“Then you can go by rail,” said Gail.

“Hey, I do not want to go by rail,” wailed Jake.

“I think trains and planes are a pain.”

Jake and Gail went to the Main Street Diner to eat steak.
They each ate a big steak that weighed
as much as eight plates.
After they ate, Gail had another great plan.
“We can paint,” she said.
Spain is a land of great painters.

“You can go to Spain on a big ship,” said Gail.

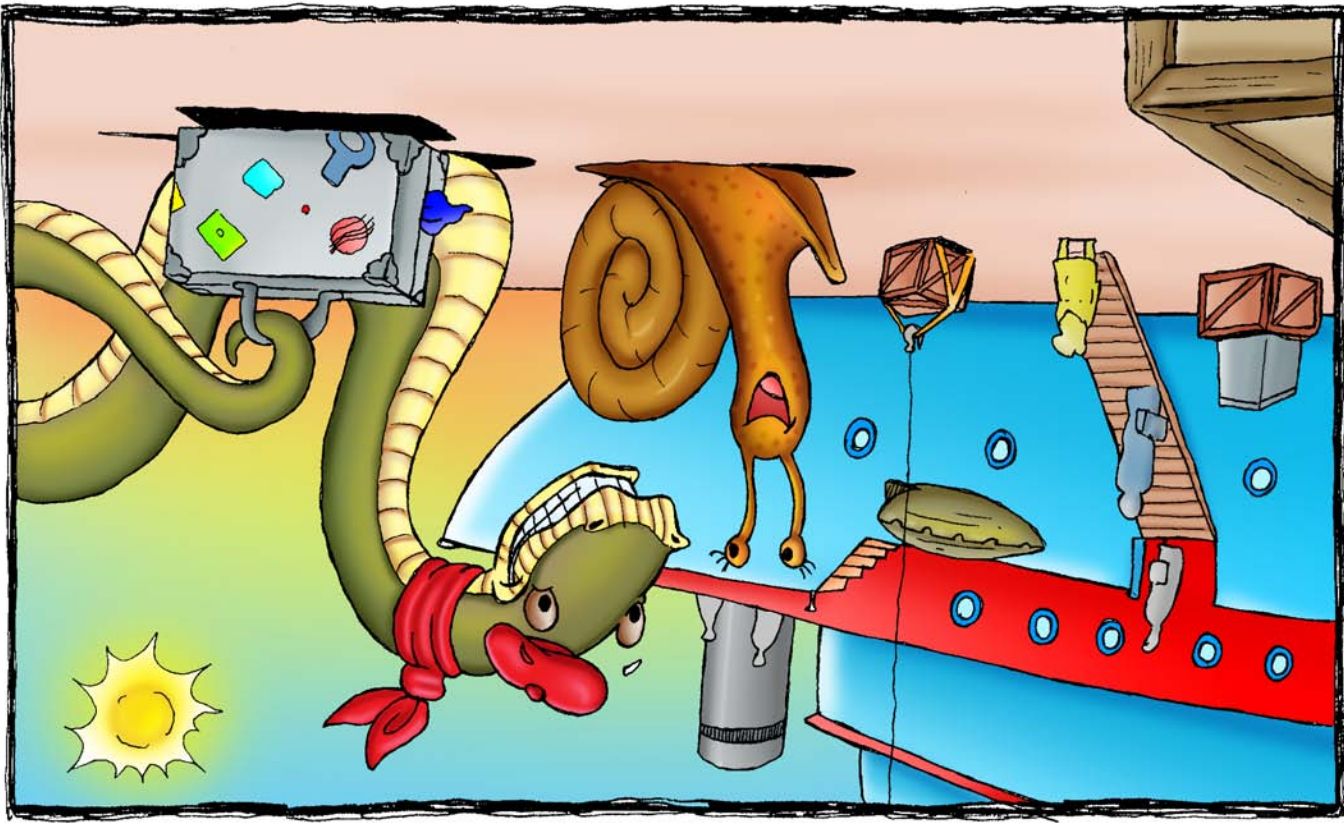

“That is a great plan,” said Jake.

“I like to sail on a big ship.

Gail, you must have a great brain
to think up such a great plan.”

Jake and Gail met on Spain's main plain.
 It rained each day they were in Spain.
 "It never fails," said Jake.
 "It always rains when I take a trip.
 What will we do now?"
 "Let's go eat a steak," said Gail.

“When will we leave?” asked Jake.

“I cannot wait to sail to Spain.”

“You have to leave today,” said Gail.

“It will take a long time to sail to Spain.

I will leave eight days later
on a gray plane.

We will meet in Spain.”

That day, Jake and Gail paid for their tickets.