

A Terrible Oil Spill

On the night of March 23, 1989, the Exxon Valdez had just started its voyage. It was full of oil. The captain joined the third mate at the wheel. He saw some ice in the water. To avoid the ice, he pointed the ship toward some rocks. He told his mate to turn the ship back toward its lane. Then the captain went to his room.

Leaving turned out to be a bad choice. The mate did not turn the ship in time. The captain heard a loud noise. The ship had hit the rocks. Oil spilled into the sea.

The oil poisoned birds. It destroyed many animals. It spoiled miles of shoreline.

People worked to clean up the oil. But the spill was large and hard to reach. They toiled for years. Now people and animals can enjoy the shoreline again.

Bamboo

Did you know that bamboo is one of the fastest-growing plants? It's true. Some kinds of bamboo can grow over a foot each day!

Bamboo has long roots. These roots keep sending up new shoots. Once bamboo is planted, it doesn't need to be planted again.

Bamboo has a woody stem. Like tree wood, bamboo has many uses. It can be used to make paper. It can be used to build furniture and shelters, too.

Forests of trees are often cut down for their wood. They may take many decades to grow back. But bamboo forests can grow back much faster. They may grow back in just a few years.

The Chinese have been using bamboo for thousands of years. Now people are looking for more ways to use bamboo. Using bamboo can help protect our trees.

Cowboy Hats

John Stetson was not a spoiled boy. He worked for his dad. He boiled fur and made it into hats. As he toiled, he dreamed of moving west.

In 1859, John finally moved west. He joined some gold diggers. The sun was hot. John's hat did not protect him from the sun, so he made a better hat. It was tall with a big brim. People pointed and laughed at his hat. But it protected him from the weather, and when it got soiled, John just brushed it off. One day, a cowboy gave John a five-dollar coin for his hat. That was a lot of money.

John did not find gold, so he went home. He made hats again, but this time he made tall hats with big brims. Today many people enjoy wearing Stetson hats.

Did I Spell It Wrong?

The words gnat, wrap, knock, gnome, and knee are alike. Do you know how?

Long ago some words were not said the way they are said now. When people said knee, they did not say it the way we do. They made the K sound.

Over time people changed the way they said some words. Sometimes the first sound was dropped. So when people said knee, they no longer made the K sound. But they still wrote the word knee with the letter K.

The printing press was invented. People started using dictionaries. The old way of writing words became too hard to change. Gnome, wrist, gnat, wrap, and knock are some of these old words. They look wrong, but they are not. They are just words we write in old ways.

Because these words are not spelled the way they sound, we have to learn them well. That way we will not spell them wrong.

Jesse Owens

Jesse Owens was born in a farming town. His family picked cotton and plowed the fields. They did not own much. His house looked like wood just thrown together. Cold wind would blow right through it. But there was something special about Jesse. Someday the whole world would know his name. How did Jesse grow from a poor boy into a star?

It started when a coach at school saw Jesse run. The coach asked Jesse to join the track team. Jesse had a lot of willpower. He showed up for practice every day. He followed his coach's directions. Soon he could zoom down the track.

Hard work paid off for Jesse. In 1936, he ran in the Olympics in Germany. The crowd watched Jesse win four events in one Olympics. Four times, the American flag slowly rose after he was crowned winner. Jesse made history.

Mount St. Helens Blew Its Top

"This is it!" Dr. David Johnston shouted into his radio. The earth shook. Rocks slid down the mountain. Cracks appeared in the ground. Then there was an awful sound and a powerful explosion. Dr. Johnston was dead. What caused his death?

Mount St. Helens is a mountain. It is also a volcano. Early in 1980, this mountain was peaceful. It was full of trees and flowers. The volcano had been quiet for 123 years. But now it was sending out clouds of smoke. A large bump had formed on its north side. Scientists thought it might come to life soon, so they kept watch.

The scientists were not wrong. On May 18, 1980, the north side of the mountain blew off. Hot ash, rock, and dirt flew 12 miles into the sky. Ash landed a thousand miles away.

Mount St. Helens is still active. No one knows when it may blow its top again.

Owls

Owls are found all around the world. The word "owl" means howl, but not all owls howl. Barn owls hiss, and great horned owls growl. Screech owls whistle up and down the scale.

Owls can see well with their round eyes. However, they cannot move their eyes the way we do. They must turn their heads to look to the side. Their heads go almost all the way around.

Owls are not great nest builders. Some owls nest in hollow trees, and others nest in bell towers. A few nest in burrows dug in the ground by other animals.

An owl will eat almost any small animal. When an owl sees a mouse, it swoops down to the ground. It pounces on its prey. It breaks the spine of the mouse with its bill. Then it opens its mouth wide and swallows the mouse whole.
