At The Yam Dash

Ash was at the yam dash. Ash had to get a stop to grab a yam and dash past a mass of ants. Ash did not get that stop past the mass of ants. "Please!" said Ash.

The stag did not pass. The mass of ants ran past the stop. "AMSI!" said Ash to the stag.

The stag eat.

The yam dash was not a win for Ash's stag. Ash and the stag ran fast, but not at the yam dash.

Why didn't the stag pass the mass of ants to get the yam?

Dear Educator,

Thank you for your purchase! This is a resource for teaching CH and TCH. It is part of a bundle for reading and spelling generalizations. I will add to the bundle monthly according to a schedule. Please see the completion schedule on the next page to find out when you may download monthly updates. More preview images are coming.

Why teach spelling generalizations?

Spelling generalizations are not necessarily the same as RULES. Often people think of the word, rule, and assume it's 100% effective. A generalization shows that when it comes to spelling, MOST of the time, here is a system that applies that is mostly reliable.

Teaching spelling generalizations can:

- help to build a child's understanding of orthographic patterns
- provide useful and meaning-filled practice that helps to build a sense of reliability and trust
- help a child begin to learn how to self-monitor their spelling.

The Hurt Finch

One day, I took a stroll to the park with some friends. We made a plan to play catch, eat lunch and play the card game, Snatch!

With the park within reach, one of my friends did spot a bench. "Let's sit here to have lunch and then play catch." So we sat on the bench and ate lunch there.

Just as we had one last munch of lunch, a finch was by the bench. Its wing was hurt and it did not fly. It had a twitch. "We need to help this finch fast!" I said. If we did not help the finch, I had a hunch that a cat would snatch it for its lunch. "Let's fill my lunchbox!" I said.

My friends and I did grab a small branch and broke it in parts. Then, we got grass and sticks. We put all the things in the lunchbox for the finch. Then we did lift the finch into the lunchbox on the bench. I did not close my lunchbox all the way. "There's a vet on Latch Street," I said. "Let's bring the hurt finch there. I spoke softly to the finch and told it that help was on the way.

Why did the finch probably twitch?

CH or TCH Rule Roll and Read

Skill: Practice reading words with the CH or TCH.

Materials: Each player will need a roll and read game board and one six-sided die. Use clear plastic bingo chips for place markers.

How To Play:

1. Decide who will go first.
2. On a turn, a player will roll the die. Whichever number they land on, they will go to the corresponding number column on their game board. They may either read one word at a time starting at the top, OR read the whole column of words.
3. When a player finishes reading a word or words for their turn, they may place ONE bingo chip on one space in the column they read. (Start at the top.)
4. Player two goes and repeats steps 2-3.
5. Keep playing to see which column of words is the first place winner. You can play for a second place winner and a third place winner if you'd like.
6. Clear the game board and play again!
